

Small Groups: Read the following propositions for your CCAT component. Discuss the questions provided with your group and take notes. In the next activity, you will summarize your group's discussion with a new group.

Coalition Membership & Structures

Propositions
Coalition Membership <ul style="list-style-type: none">A) Coalition formation usually begins by recruiting a core group of people who are committed to resolve the health or social issue; and,B) More effective coalitions result when the core group expands to include a broader constituency of participants who represent diverse interest groups, agencies, organizations, and institutions. Structures <ul style="list-style-type: none">A) Formalized rules, roles, structures, and procedures make collaborative synergy more likely.
Discussion questions
Question 1: Do the propositions in your components align with your experience? In what ways do they or do they not align?

This activity, including discussion questions and instructions, were developed by evaluators at The Evaluation Center – CU Denver. The propositions listed come from the Community Coalition Action Theory (Butterfoss & Kegler, 2002).

Question 2: What, specifically, about each proposition have you found to be essential?

Question 3: What outcomes have you observed because of a given proposition(s). For example, what is the result of formalized rules, roles, structures, and procedures?

This activity, including discussion questions and instructions, were developed by evaluators at The Evaluation Center – CU Denver. The propositions listed come from the Community Coalition Action Theory (Butterfoss & Kegler, 2002).